By faith, we are told, we can move mountains, not necessarily physical mountains, but certainly mountains of fear and trouble. Because such mountains may be so moved there is no less credit due the source of inspiration.

The fear-sickness into which this country worked itself was thus cured by the Government Bond issue of 1892. What the Federal Reserve Act has done for us during the past twenty-two months is no less striking an example of the faith-cure.

There are times in the life of a nation when. as in business, it is good to take inventory. Independent of the benign influence of the Federal Reserve Act, we have an Income Tax Law actually upon our books; we have a Federal Trade Commission; we have the admirable work of the Department of Justice; we shall have a bi-partisan tariff commission-these things have not only given the United States a place in the sun, but they have helped to create a public instead of a partisan spirit.

Our quadrennial political upheaval is at hand, but the Harriman National Bank is convinced that, regardless of the hysterically vocal utterances on topics of the day, the underlying conservative sentiment of the sober, though as yet perhaps silent, judgment of the country will be ultimately served.

Why Not Face the Facts About Armor Competition?

To the People:

The policy of the United States Government for many years has made any real competition in armor-making ineffective.

The Government has considered it good policy to so distribute its armor business as to maintain a large reserve armor-making capacity ready for emergencies. The Government might have asked the three armor plants for bids and let the entire tonnage > to the lowest bidder. That would have made competition effective. The result of such a course would have been to drive two of the three manufacturers out of business, and leave the country with the facilities of only one

> > The Government in fact has always asked for bids from the three manufacturers, but no matter what the prices quoted, each year's business was divided among them.

These are the results of that policy:

plant in time of need.

It pays a lower price than that paid by any other great naval power, and Without extra expense it has available a large reserve armor-making capacity.

Armor makers serve but one customer—the Government, just as a PUBLIC UTILITY serves but one customer a community.

The solution of the public utility problem is regulation of rates.

The solution of the armor problem is for the Government to fix the price.

WE VOLUNTARILY AGREE TO ACCEPT ANY PRICE FIXED BY THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.
